

J. Fraden

Appl. No. 10/612,112

January 30, 2004

Abstract

A medical probe for collecting signals from a body cavity having a profile which is a combination of an outside frustum shape and the multiple surface cavities or indentations situated on the probe outer surface. The probe outer surface when enveloped by a thin probe cover material forms air pockets, thus 5 reducing thermal conductivity across the probe walls and minimizing negative effects of the lateral heat transfer.